

Secretary of State Mac Warner Interview

-Olivia Hall

Today I got the privilege of interviewing our Secretary of State, Mac Warner. We got to ask him three questions, and the questions and answers follow.

1. What did you study in college and high school that you feel helped prepare you to pursue a career in government? Mr. Warner has a college background in Political Science and Engineering, and he said that he believes that the politics of Political Science and the organizational aspect of Engineering helped him to get to where he is today.

2. What do you feel the importance behind encouraging young people to register to vote is? The Secretary of State believes that, "Voting is the foundation to continue with life," and he believes that all young people should register to vote as soon as they come of age.

3. How did you transition your life from a military environment to a government environment? "Well, as I stated earlier, I have organizational skills from Engineering, and the military just built on that, so it was incredibly easy to transition, and I was happy to do it"
